COMPILED BY CHERYLCURRIE.COM

1. Pick an ocean and write a scene about traveling on, under or above it in some kind of vessel.
2. Pick a character and draw a genealogy family tree going back 3 generations then describe their relationship to it (and whether they are related to it or not).
3. Write a scene about what your protagonist does with the first hour of his day using a lot of detail.
4. The next time you're in a car in a parking lot, write a passage about the crabbest car in the parking lot and its passengers.
5. Write a character sketch based on a stranger's voice (from a radio broadcast or an online recording).
6. Use your bucket list or write one then write a story about each item on the list.
7. Write something you experienced with money on the edge of a dollar bill and spend it so it goes into circulation. Note from C.L.Currie – don't write all over it and deface the money as that is illegal.
8. Write your earliest memory down in detail using at least 3 sentences.

9. Put your protagonist in a “way-back machine” and drop them off in middle-ages Europe unless you’re writing about middle-ages Europe already in which case drop him or her off in 21st century Japan and have him or her interact with the locals.
10. Write a scene involving at least two deaths keeping it to the facts.
11. Write a scene about an ugly sweater, a walking stick and a picnic basket (not necessarily any people in it such as a murder scene or animated objects).
